Are Strikers By Presence Of Military.

MAJORITY OF SILK MILLS ARE NOW OPEN.

RIOTING RENEWED AT TORONTO.

There Are Now Rumors that Street Car Strike There Has Been Settled—Militia Arrives.

Paterson, N. J., June 23.—The dyers' helpers who are on a strike seem to have been cowed into quiet by the military and the determined stand made by Mayor Minnichell. The majority of the silk mills opened this morning but all are short handed. No violence was offered anywhere. Details of cavalry under Lieut. Bryant patrolled the Italian quarters here this morning in search of strike leaders.

RIOTING RENEWED.

Toronto, Ont., June 23.—Street car rioting was renewed this morning. Attempts were made to run cars from north and east Toronto and from Toronto sheds but in each case the cars were stoned by the mob and had to return to the sheds. Motormen in charge of the cars were rather badly used. The police were unable to handle the mob and after a hurried consultation it was decided by the city authorities and street railway people not to try to run cars till noon. Rumors are now prevalent that settlement has been reached. The militia arrived at 10 o'clock today.

ADJOURNMENT

Of Congress Will Hardly Take Place Before July 5 and it May be in Following Week.

Washington, June 23.—Senator Allison, chairman of the Senate committee on appropriations and Representative Cannon of the House committee on appropriations this morning discussed the condition of business in the two houses and both say that in their opinion it will not be possible to get through with everything so as to enable Congress to adjourn before July 5th. They think a session on Independence Day will be inevitable. If both houses decide to take a holiday on that day, it is likely that final adjournment will be postponed until the following week.

LOST AN EAR

An Old Soldier in Knox County is in Critical Condition from an Assault—No Arrest.

Mt. Vernon, O., June 23.—Near Danville, Joseph Hoegland, an old soldier, had chicken for supper and James Mills, a neighbor, claimed that it had been taken from his coop. He went over to Hoegland's house and hot words were exchanged. It is claimed that Mills picked up a large board and struck Hoegland, completely severing the left ear from the head. The old man fell to the ground unconscious. He was carried into his home where an examination by a physician showed that his injuries were very serious. He is suffering from internal injuries to the head, and several physicians who have been called, pronounce his condition as critical. No arrests have been made as yet.

IN DENSE FOG

Engines Collided at Mingo Junction Monday, Killing Two Trainmen and Injuring Seven

Steubenville, O., June 23.—Two engines running light on the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad came together at the north end of Mingo Junction yards in a heavy fog this morning. Both engines plunged into each other and stuck and were total wrecks.

The collision and escaping steam were responsible for the deaths of two and injury of seven other trainmen, however not seriously. C. R. Walker of Toronto, a brakeman, was caught between the engine and tender, held fast and scalded to death. F. W. McElroy of Fairmont, W. Va., was squeezed against the firebox and scalded to death.

PRAISED IRISH

Capetown, June 23.—General Lord Kitchener arrived here today en route for England. He was given a great ovation. Several congratulatory addresses were presented to him. Replying to the Irish address, Lord Kitchener said: "Irishmen have shown themselves loyal to their King and country all over the world." He then eulogized the work of the Irish regiments during the war. The enormous crowd which was present frantically cheered Lord Kitchener as he left.

Dewey To Testify.

Washington, June 24.—Admiral Dewey has been summoned to appear before the Senate committee on Philippines on Thursday next. The committee decided a long time ago to secure his testimony as to the exact situation at Manila during the early days of American occupation and especially as to promises and relations established by him with Aguinaldo and the Filipinos. The introduction of water cure testimony and evidence in rebuttal, however, interfered with the original plan.

The trackless trolley car, a European conception, described in Popular Mechanics a short time ago, is to make its appearance in America.

HOTEL

Collapsed But Fortunately Nobody Killed.

SCORE OF VICTIMS BURIED IN DEBRIS AT DALLAS

THREE PEOPLE BADLY INJURED.

A Dozen Badly Hurt—Cause of the Disaster Not Yet Known—Old Hotel Building.

Dallas, Texas, June 23.—The St. James Hotel and the Sherman House collapsed shortly before 2 o'clock this morning, burying a score of the inmates, but miraculously resulting in no deaths. In the St. James Hotel three persons were seriously and about 12 slightly injured.

It was reported early that twenty people had been killed but all the guests were removed from the debris alive.

Among those injured are J. Fife and James Nolan, the well-known sporting writer. Nolan is thought to be internally injured.

Mr. Fitcher, the manager of the hotel, was too dazed this morning to talk about the calamity and seemed to have no idea as to the extent of the disaster.

The St. James was a large three-story building between Main and Commerce streets. It was erected 25 or 30 years ago, and had a large country patronage.

Lancaster, O., June 23.—In a row on the street shortly after midnight Sunday morning Ralph Blizzard, a seventeen year old boy, struck Allen Partee, aged 25, on the head with a beer bottle, fracturing his skull, and Partee died last night. Partee until recently, was employed as a motorman on the street railway here.

The ground floor will be used for mercantile purposes, the fifth floor and a part of the fourth will be used for lodgerooms and the remainder of the building will be used for office rooms.

RESCUER

Was Attacked by the Fellow He Had Saved and Narrowly Escaped With His Life.

Columbus, O., June 23.—Because he was refused a drink from a can of beer Cas. Williams cut Andrew Jackson across the abdomen in a Bad Lands saloon Sunday afternoon, inflicting a fatal wound. A frenzied mob of colored men pursued Williams through the principal streets of Columbus, overtaking him at High and Long streets. They were preparing to string him to a telephone pole when Detective Richard Owens, who was on a passing car, jumped off and rescued him from the mob. Williams still held in his hand the knife with which he had cut Jackson, and made several desperate attempts to kill the officer. A member of the mob armed with a billiard cue hit Williams over the head, knocking him to the ground, without doubt saving the life of the officer, who was unarmed. Owens fought back the crowd until Officer O'Rourke came to his assistance and Williams was taken to the city prison.

Jackson was the principal in a celebrated case several years ago. He is from Roanoke, Va., where he worked for a planter, whose daughter, becoming enamored of Jackson, ran away with him. The Virginia authorities followed the couple to Columbus and attempted to secure the extradition of Jackson, but Governor Nash refused to honor the requisition as the parties had married after coming to Ohio. Since that time the pair have been living in Columbus, and Jackson has been arrested several times on charges of beating his wife.

FIGHT

In Which Zanesville Mayor Figures.

CHIEF OF POLICE TRACY USED HIS MACE

OVER MAYOR HOLDEN'S HEAD.

Police Judge Reed Says He Proposes to Fine Mayor Holden for Contempt of Court.

Zanesville, O., June 23.—While Police Judge Reed was holding court this morning, Mayor James L. Holden appeared and asked to have an affidavit charging drunkenness against Altavan withdrawn. Judge Reed refused and proceeded with the trial, Reed ordering Chief of Police Tracy to remove Mayor Holden from the room. Tracy seized Holden and a fight ensued. Tracy used his mace, striking the Mayor over the head a number of times and ejected him. Bad blood has existed for some time and friends of both fear serious consequences. Judge Reed says he will fine Holden for contempt.

OVER 100 DROWN.

London, June 23.—A dispatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that the Chinese cruiser Kai-Chi was wrecked Sunday by a terrific explosion while lying in the Yangtze river. The Kai Chi sank in 30 seconds and 150 officers and men on board were killed or drowned. Only two men on board the cruiser escaped death.

Mr. Fisher Here.

General Manager Fisher of the Columbus, London and Springfield electric railroad, who is at present engaged in the supervision of the construction of the Columbus, Delaware and Marion line, made a visit to Newark Sunday, where he inspected a new work car, which has been built by the Jewett car works for the latter road. Mr. Fisher stated that the car will be ready by Wednesday, when it would be sent to Columbus over the Buckeye Lake line.

From Columbus it will be shipped to Delaware and at once put into service in the construction of the Columbus, Delaware and Marion road. The car is 36 feet long, has four 50 horse power motors, air brake, and the standard M. C. B. coupler of the automatic pattern.

NO HOPE

For The Cuban Treaty Now Remains.

IF ONE IS PRESENTED IT WILL BE PIGEONHOLED.

EXTRA SESSION NOT PROBABLE.

Both Admit That Congress Will Not Act—Wouldn't be Expedient Politically.

Washington, June 23.—If President Roosevelt has the temerity to send to the Senate at this session a reciprocity treaty with Cuba it will be either rejected directly or pigeonholed. There is no doubt at all about this. Administration senators, as well as the best sugar men, are almost unanimous in their declaration.

It is understood that Senators Allison, Foraker and Proctor, who called at the White House during the day, told Mr. Roosevelt this very plainly, and it is therefore probable that the draft of the treaty now in the hands of Secretary Hay awaiting the signature of the Cuban minister will remain there for the present.

"It would be a very injudicious thing for the President to do," was the way a Senator very close to the executive expressed himself. "The Senate is not used to having Presidents spring surprises upon it, and this is what the sending of a treaty to the capitol now would amount to. In such matters we look to the President to treat us in a frank and open way, and it would be a bad precedent if we ratified his will after having been treated in the manner that Roosevelt is said to have in mind."

Nobody now disputes that the session will close without anything what ever having been done for the relief of Cuba. Senators Allison and Aldrich have thrown up the sponge, and those who know the character of the men realize that the mace must indeed be hopeless for them to abandon it.

There will be no further caucusing by the Republican senators unless there is a decided change in the sentiment of some of the beet sugar men. That is the way the leaders put it, and it means that there will not be another conference, for the insurgents, instead of showing any signs of weakness as a result of the appeals to party loyalty made to them, are more jubilant than ever.

It is possible that the President may call the Senate in extra session in October, at which a Cuban treaty will be presented, but it is now an open question whether this will be done. What Mr. Roosevelt wants to impress upon the country is that the Republican party intends to extend aid to Cuba and if he can have a treaty jammed through before the elections so much the better.

It is believed, however, a two-thirds vote cannot be had for the instrument. The effect of such a defeat immediately before election would, it is felt, have a worse effect upon Republican success than if no extra session had been called. For this reason it would not be surprising if the whole matter went over until the December session.

Senator Elkins gave an interview, in which he criticized President Roosevelt by inference. He said President McKinley would never have gotten the party into such a tangle. The reciprocity that is now offered, he said, was not the reciprocity of Blaine, Harrison or McKinley. He points out the danger to the Republican party of tampering with the tariff in a legislative way, on the ground that it will give grounds for a general division of the schedules. He says that reciprocity with foreign countries should be held solely through the medium of treaties, but intimates that such treaties must be most carefully drawn, so that the benefits shall not go into the trusts.

At the end of eight months the Administration has to its credit: The passage of the irrigation bill. The installation of the Cuban Government. Considerable progress in the pacification of the Philippines. The entertainment of Prince Henry of Prussia. The entertainment of the Rochambeau visitors. A most brilliant social season. To its debit is has:

Scandals in the Philippines. The consummation of the Schley persecution. The Wood scandal. Rebuke of Miles. Nothing done with the "trusts." The tariff untouched. The army bill dead. The Philippine Government bill still pending. A crushing humiliating defeat of the Cuban reciprocity bill, and a party more divided than at any time since 1896.

WATERMELON DEADLY FOR FOUR LITTLE ONES.

New York, June 23.—Three of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hartmann of Guttenberg, N. J., are dead from eating watermelon, and there is little hope of saving the fourth child's life. The three victims are George, 7 years old; Sadie, 4, and Frederick, 2. The remaining child is Willie, who is 9. The children became ill five days ago after eating heartily of the melon. A physician declared they were suffering from acute dysentery. George and Frederick died on Friday and Sadie Saturday afternoon. One physician declared ptomaine poisoning the cause.

Admits Arson.

Hamilton, O., June 23.—The mystery concerning the origin of the recent disastrous fires at the Fordham and Franklin mills, belonging to the Sterling Paper Company, involving a loss of $140,000 and the throwing out of employment of 100 employees, has been cleared up by State Fire Marshal Beardsley, of Columbus, and District Marshal John Ambrose of Cincinnati, in their arrest of Mark Welborn, aged 16 years. The lad has made a full confession, showing no sign of remorse or realization of the enormity of the crime.

Hamilton, O., June 23.—Mark Welborn, the young firebug, was arraigned before Mayor Bosch this morning. He pleaded guilty to setting fire to the Franklin Paper Mill April 28, and the Fordham Mill June 13. He was bound over in $3,000 in each case and in default of bail, was remanded to jail. Welborn is unconcerned and cool and at times makes the assertion that he was assisted by another boy but will give no name.

A Joke on Depew.

London, June 23.—The English have a joke on Chauncey M. Depew. He told the reporters he would not attend the coronation because he would have to wear knickerbockers. King Edward now states that guests can appear in frock coats if they wish. It is now stated that Chauncey never got invited to the coronation.

WRECK

Caused by Misplaced Switch Results in Two Deaths and Four Serious Injuries.

St. Paul, Minn., June 23.—A passenger train on the Sioux City branch of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railroad, jumped the track at Oshkosh, Iowa, Sunday.

The Dead.

C. J. Robinson, mail clerk. Barrett, fireman, terribly scalded by escaping steam, died shortly after being taken from under engine.

The Injured.

James Erskine, F. E. Weston, C. H. Hall, U. S. Thompson, all mail clerks and all were seriously injured. The passengers injured were attended by surgeons who were brought to the scene of the wreck on a wrecking train and all were able to continue their journey.

The cause of the wreck is said to have been a misplaced switch.

Fell on His Head.

Columbus, O., June 23.—William Ellison, an ice handler, was standing on the back steps of his wagon as it crossed the Toledo and Ohio Central tracks Sunday afternoon. An excursion train struck the wagon, throwing Ellison 25 feet up into the air. He alighted on his head, and will die from the injury.

NURSE

Is Put On Trial For Crime Of Murder.

FOURTEEN PATIENTS OF JANE TOPPAN DIED.

SHE HAD A MANIA FOR MONEY.

And It May be Advanced as a Motive for the Crimes—Defense May be Insanity.

Barnstable, Mass., June 23.—Today the trial of Jane Toppan, the nurse, for murder began.

While Jane Toppan stands trial on three indictments for murder, it is alleged that no less than eleven more persons have died by her hand. The victims all died by poisoning. As a trained nurse Miss Toppan had a wide knowledge of poisons and her vocation also gave her innumerable opportunities to administer poison. After her arrest it was admitted that no tangible or logical motive could be found for the alleged crimes and the state employed three experts to examine the woman. The series of deaths that followed Miss Toppan's residence in various households is remarkable. Suspicion first rested upon her when Alden P. Davis, his wife and their two daughters, Mrs. Mary D. Gibbs and Mrs. Genevieve Gordon, the latter a white woman, succumbed suddenly to a peculiar illness and died. It was weeks after their burial however, that an investigation was started and the poison theory advanced.

Miss Toppan had in the meantime disappeared. The police finally discovered her in a New Hampshire town.

Jane Toppan is middleaged and unprepossessing. She had long experience in hospital work as a nurse. Those familiar with her ways say she has a mania for money and clothes and the state may advance this as a motive for the crimes with which she is charged. State officers will allege that certain property disappeared from the Alden Davis home. The defense may put in a plea of insanity. The following is a list of those alleged to have died under Miss Toppan's nursing:

Alden P. Davis, Mrs. Alden P. Davis, Mrs. Mary D. Gibbs, Mrs. Genevieve D. Gordon, Mrs. Mary McNear, W. H. Ingraham, Mrs. Edna Bannister, Ludlow Churchill, Miss Florence Calkins, Mrs. O. A. Brigham, Israel P. Dunham, Mrs. Israel P. Dunham, Miss Sarah A. Connors, Wm. T. Nichols.

Zanesville, O., June 23.—In the selection of the Republican County Executive Committee Congressman Van Voorhis's plans and candidates were defeated in every instance. The control of Muskingum county politics is now vested in a new pair of leaders, John Hoge, the millionaire newspaper man, and George K. Browning.

THE ISTHMIAN CANAL.

The Isthmian canal bill as passed by the senate, known as the Spooner substitute for the house, or Hepburn bill, provides that the president shall proceed to the construction of a canal by the Panama route provided a clear title can be obtained for $40,000,000 within a reasonable time; otherwise he is to proceed by the Nicaragua route.

This provision, which has been the chief bone of contention during the many days of debate in the senate, seems likely to be concurred in by the house without material modification.

The house passed the Hepburn bill after scant debate in what looked like a fit of impatience at the long delay, at a time when it was supposed that the Panama property and rights could not be had for less than $100,000,000 and when, in view of that supposition, the Walker commission had recommended the Nicaragua route.

Later the Panama company came down in its price to $40,000,000 and the Walker commission unanimously recommended that the offer be accepted if the company could give a clear title, with no lawsuits attached.

This placed the matter in an entirely different light. While many senators and representatives had committed themselves strongly to the Nicaragua route and had persuaded themselves or fallen into the habit of thinking that it was the best and only practicable route, it was hardly to be expected that the senate would cast aside the unanimous recommendation of a commission of experts which had carefully studied both routes and had presumably come to its conclusion without prejudice upon the scientific grounds and considerations of the general interests.

Nor is it to be expected that the house will pursue such a course. The Hepburns, who are committed, and those who are actuated by considerations of supposed sectional interests may hold out for Nicaragua, but it is reasonable to suppose that a majority will support the Spooner substitute so far as it relates to choice of route.

It is to be presumed that Senators have been influenced by the opinions of an expert commission, much as they would be if they were contemplating the investment of their own money in some great enterprise for the successful accomplishment of which scientific and expert knowledge were indispensable.

A majority of the representatives are likely to be influenced in like manner to concur in the substance of the Spooner bill, though they may not concur in all the details. The canal will be put through by one route or the other.

GOVERNOR HILL'S PLATFORM.

In the course of his speech at the Tilden club on Thursday evening Governor Hill suggested a Democratic platform on which all genuine Democrats could stand as follows:

1. Freedom of speech.
2. Preservation of constitutional liberty wherever American sovereignty extends.
3. Opposition to the maintenance as a permanent policy of dependent colonies to be governed outside of the constitution.
4. The civil power to be always superior to the military.
5. Public taxation to be imposed for public purposes only.
6. Freedom of commerce and, therefore, genuine reciprocity with foreign nations.
7. Opposition to corporate combinations which create monopolies, stifle competition and unreasonably enhance the prices of the necessities of life.
8. Free trade in all articles controlled by trusts.
9. Justice to Cuba and justice to the consumers of the United States also.
10. Hard money as opposed to an irredeemable paper currency.
11. To recognize the dignity of labor and its right to demand just and adequate compensation.
12. Opposition to an immense standing army in time of peace.
13. Constitutional reform providing for the election of United States senators by the people of the several states.
14. Peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations and entangling alliances with none.

The prompt recognition by Spain of the Cuban Republic as an independent international State calls for remark. The Spanish monarchy denied recognition to the Republic of South America for more than a generation after their separation from the step-motherly motherland. The times have changed and Spain has changed with them, as has everybody and everything in the world.

The cost of the Philippine occupation up to April, 1902, is stated by Secretary Root to be something over $170,000,000. As there are over 1,400 islands in the archipelago, the cost thus far is about equal to $122,000 per island. Considered as a transaction in real estate, this is certainly a pretty high price.

THE W. C. T. U.

On last Tuesday the devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. O. Bourner, who selected the 13th chapter of Romans for the Scripture lesson: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher power. For there is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God." The devotional half hour was followed by a Mothers' Meeting, in charge of Mrs. B. F. Patt.

Very interesting and helpful selections were read by Mesdames Hansberger, Anderson, and Keim. The meeting was well attended by members and visitors. At the close refreshments were served by the Superintendent of entertainment, Mrs. W. W. Anderson, assisted by Mrs. Patt and Mrs. Abbott. Tomorrow the devotionals will be led by Mrs. Bane. Responsive reading by Mrs. Reid.

The 28th of June (Saturday afternoon) has been chosen to dedicate the fountain and wells. Mrs. Patt, chairman of the committee, is arranging the program.

She forms a picture pleasing;
She holds full sway
When'er they pass
Or serious or teasing.

She's here and there,
She's everywhere,
In all directions going;
Amid the hues
Of black and blues
Her shirt waist bright is glowing.

When days are hot,
They worry not,
This girl attired so lightly,
For as a rule
She's trim and cool
And always smiling brightly.

Long she will reign,
Till summer's wane,
E'er winning approbation,
And she'll be queen
There'er you see
On faraway vacation.

So careful be When'er you see
The shirt waist girl so charming,
For hearts she breaks
And conquests makes
In manner that's alarming.

MR. BOWSER'S CANDY.

HE TRIES HIS HAND AT MAKING THE OLD FASHIONED KIND.

The Cat Gorgies With Joy at His Experiment, Which Would Have Proved a Great Success Had the Flavoring Been All Right.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

JUST as the Bowsers had finished dinner the grocer's boy handed in a gallon jug, and as the cook pulled the cork and found the contents to be molasses she reported that some mistake had been made. "There is no mistake," replied Mr. Bowser. "I ordered the molasses as I came along."

"But how did you happen to do that?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"I am going to pass a homelike evening, and to help me do it I am going to make some old fashioned molasses candy. I have been longing for some for months past."

"Not the kind my mother used to make. You can buy a compound made up of glue, molasses, coffee grounds, saleratus and shavings, but I don't and I feel as if I could eat the whole outfit. I must watch for the air bubbles."

In ten minutes more he saw them rising to the surface and poured the contents of the kettle into a pan to cool. In a dim way he remembered that his mother used to put in flavorings, and, hunting through the cupboard, he found vanilla and cinnamon and put them in with a generous hand. As he cooled a spoonful, however, there seemed to be something lacking, and after a moment's thought he went up stairs and queried of Mrs. Bowser:

"Don't you remember that I bought a bottle of wintergreen essence some time ago? It's exactly what mother used to use in her candy. Bless me, but how many times in my boyhood I have hunted for the delicious wintergreen berries!"

"If there is any, you'll find it in the right hand cupboard," she replied, "but you want to be careful. There are a lot of other bottles there. It smells as if you had scoured the molasses."

"Just enough to give it the right taste. I'll show you some candy that is candy in about ten minutes. If this smell gets out on the street, everybody will be waiting a taste."

There were a score of bottles in the cupboard, and Mr. Bowser ran his eye over them and selected one and sniffed its contents and poured them into the dish and stirred vigorously. He waited the finishing touch. He waited to grease his hands with butter and then bore the dish up stairs in triumph and set it down under Mrs. Bowser's nose and said:

"If you don't say that this beats anything you ever tasted, I'll buy you the nicest hat in town. Pitch right in."

"It has a queer smell," she replied as she sniffed at it.

"Your nose must be off. The smell is simply delicious, and as for the taste—ah—um!"

There was only one "ah—um!" He began to choke as he chewed, but recollecting that Mrs. Bowser had proposed him he bravely hung on until she suddenly rose up and said:

"Are you sure you got the right bottle out of the cupboard?"

"Of course I'm sure. What's the matter with you?"

"It smells as if you had flavored it with benzine. I know the cook had a bottle of it to clean a collar."

"But do you think I'm such a fool that I can't tell benzine from wintergreen?" he shouted, though he turned pale and lost his taste for old fashioned molasses candy in an instant.

"We'll see."

He followed her down to the kitchen, and she picked up the empty bottle and read the label and held it out to him. The word "Benzine" was bigger than a house, but he had doped his candy with three ounces of it.

"Did your mother use this flavoring in your happy boyhood days?" she asked as he turned red and white and a look of fear came into his eyes.

"Am I—am I poisoned?" he whispered in reply.

"No, but it's not your fault. Is there nothing in the present sacred to you? Why didn't you open a box of chloride of lime and douse it in? If you want what that sort. I never think of the old farmhouse without thinking of molasses candy. Mother used to make a kind that one could never get enough of, and I am sure I can turn out something just as good."

"You'll only muss up the kitchen and make the cook mad," sighed Mrs. Bowser.

"I shall muss up nothing, and the cook won't get mad. I think she will see what you fail to—the sentiment of the thing. You may smile at my connecting sentiment with molasses candy, but it's there just the same. Some of the happiest evenings of my boyhood were spent in—"

"In gorging down molasses candy," she finished as he hesitated.

"There you go! Woman, is there nothing in the past sacred to you? Is it nothing to you that my parents are dead, my brothers and sisters scattered and that the dear old homestead is now in the hands of a wall eyed pirate who has turned it into a mule farm? By John, but I believe you would stand beside the tomb of Washington and haggie with a shoestring man over a cent!"

"The cat came up from the basement and saw that there was fun ahead and sat down to wait for developments."

"I am sorry if I hurt your feelings," said Mrs. Bowser after a time, "but it never occurred to me to connect sentiment and molasses candy. There are songs about boyhood and pear trees, elder mills, babbling brooks and all that, and I don't know why they shouldn't sing of boyhood and molasses candy. The cook has just gone up stairs, and you can have the kitchen all to yourself."

Mr. Bowser walked to and fro and looked at her, but as she said no more he finally descended the stairs and began to work. The cat followed him, and as she saw him poking up the fire and pouring the molasses into a kettle she walked around and gurgled to herself. When the jug had been emptied, the kettle was placed on the stove, and Mr. Bowser sat down with a big spoon in hand to stir the contents and call up old recollections. There were more recollections than stir, and as a consequence Mrs. Bowser soon got the scent of scorched molasses. She didn't feel it her duty to make any investigation, however. Even when the kettle suddenly boiled over and a great cloud of smoke swept across the kitchen and upstairs, causing Mr. Bowser to cough and the cat to sneeze, she made no interruption.

"That's as it should be," he mused as he stirred away. "There was always a burnt smell in the house when mother was making candy. That smell takes me back to the dear old days, to die, why not stick your head into the washtub?"

"Wo—woman, I understand! I see through the plot! I—I—" "You sit down and think of your boyhood days," she interrupted—"of your mother and old fashioned molasses candy and benzine and death! I'm going to bed, and I'll pitch that dish out of the window to the cats as I go along!"

Mr. Bowser tottered to a chair and sat down and thought and thought. At midnight Mrs. Bowser came softly down stairs to find him asleep in his chair and the cat sitting on the kitchen table to act as his guardian angel. "The feline had a grin on her face, but she wasn't saying a word to disturb the harmony of the occasion."

Abigail's Fourth of July.
Abigail Stone strolled off alone
While yet the morn was hazy;
The neighbors' boys made such a noise
They almost drove her crazy.
"I love my country well," said he,
To spoil July's sweet jubilee
By making such a din, sir!"

So, in a nook beside a brook,
Serenely sound asleep, sir,
Abigail lay the livelong day,
Curled in a little heap, sir,
While in the town the brass bands
brayed
And cannon boomed like thunder
Until a very small boy came
A most tremendous blunder.

For, just at dark, he dropped a spark
Where sparks are very worst, sir,
A blinding flash—a frightful crash—
And cannon boomed like thunder
Until a very small boy came
A most tremendous blunder.

Primary Director McKinley narrowly escaped being victimized by a ger who called upon him for transportation to Newark Saturday. A stranger said he was an old soldier from Kentucky and gave him the name of D. D. Dove. He said he came Friday with $36 in his pocket and was robbed at one of the parks. He wanted to go to Newark, where he had friends, and the director wrote an order for the railroad. A short time later, when the wagon drove up to take him to the depot he suddenly disappeared and could not be found about city hall. From the description him however, the officers were able to identify him and at the same time found out for his sudden disappearance. He declared that they had arrested a man in the Bad Lands a few days ago for drunkenness and that he was an imposter. He was evidently afraid exposure and therefore took flight when the patrol wagon drove up to the City Hall.

FOUND MOTHER DEAD

Mrs. Elizabeth Kneeland Who Lived Alone in House on Cedar Street Had Been Dead Several Days—Gruesome Discovery Made by Daughter May Miller.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kneeland, aged 62 years, was found dead Saturday night about 9:30 o'clock under very distressing circumstances, by her daughter, Mrs. May Miller.

Mrs. Kneeland was a widow, and lived alone in a cottage house on Cedar street, nearly opposite Cedar Hill cemetery gate. She was last seen Wednesday when she visited a neighbor, Mrs. Christian Weipert, who lives across the street. She was apparently in as good general health as usual, complaining of a sore foot in which she had run a nail about a week before. There were no symptoms of the near approach of death.

Mrs. Miller left Wednesday for Toronto to bring home her daughter who attended school there, and returned with the young lady Saturday evening, going to her house on Harrison street. Later she took her daughter in a back to the Kneeland home, the young lady making her home with her grandmother.

Finding the house locked up, Mrs. Miller went to Tucker's saloon across the street, where she stated the facts, and expressed some alarm. Ambrose Schoke, the bartender, who was in the place, went back with her, and climbed in the window. A horrible stench assailed his nostrils and after he had opened the door, Mrs. Miller found the terribly decomposed body of her mother lying on the bed in the front room. Undertaker J. A. McGonagle was sent for, and later Coroner Scott J. Evans was sent for. The remains were prepared for burial, and the funeral took place from the home at four o'clock Sunday afternoon, Rev. J. B. Bovey conducting the services.

The death was probably caused by the wound in the foot, which developed lockjaw or blood poisoning. Coroner Evans held an inquest Saturday night, and a verdict will be rendered according to the facts as recited above.

The deceased leaves two children, Mrs. May Miller, and William Kneeland, who is now employed in Washington, Ind. He arrived in Newark last night, but will return to Indiana

The young men immediately pulled for the capsized boat and succeeded in rescuing the entire party, none of whom suffered much from their ducking.

THE ONLY WAY THE BEST.

A Porto Rican's Peculiar Method of Milking a Cow.

"I was stationed in Porto Rico for a year or more," said a volunteer of the late war, "and I found one custom in particular that I looked upon as too funny for anything. No cow is ever milked until after her hind legs have been tied together in the most secure manner. I have seen a man spend far more time with the rope than in milking. As I was born on a farm and have milked a cow thousands of times I was of course interested, and more so because I never saw a cow otherwise than gentle. I set out to try to convince the natives that they were going to a great deal of trouble for nothing, but I never quite satisfied them. I set down and milked their cows without their legs being tied and then got up to say: 'There; don't you see that it is far easier my way?'"

"I do, senator," would be the reply. "Then why not do it my way? Why tie up the legs of a cow when there is no need of it?"

"But suppose she should kick?"

"You may as well suppose she won't."

"Ah, senator, that is the very thing. If we suppose she will kick and won't kick, then we must be worrying all the time as to which it will be, and so it is better to tie her legs and keep our thoughts on our greatness as a people."

A ROMANCE

Grandmother had passed away. I stood in her room before the great old fashioned wardrobe from which she used to give me dainties. On my birthday presents came from this storehouse, and I imagined it always full of delightful things and regarded grandmother as almost a fairy.

With these remembrances in my mind I opened it now. It was full of fragrant linen scented with lavender, except for a little shelf at one side, where lay several papers. I picked up a roll of yellow writing paper tied with a pink ribbon and carried it to the light. Had I any right to read the pages? They were discolored by age, but I knew the writing. Could grandmother have any secrets which she would wish to keep after death? Even as I debated I had untied the ribbon and discovered that I held a diary in my hands, and the first words in it were of love, sweet, pure and tender, the first love of a young girl. I could not resist, and I read the pages, as I stood there in the fading light, which laid before me the romance of my grandmother.

It was in the month of June, 1812, on a beautiful evening, when even the flowers exhale more strongly their subtle perfumes and the human heart has a desire to open. Here in the twilight of the old garden grandmother heard the first words of love.

Beneath the deeper shadow of the trees, wrapped in the sweet odor of the flowers, two figures, a young girl and a young man, walked side by side with slow steps.

"Yes, Clarisse, I am going," said the young man. "And what difference does it make? Suppose I never return from the war? Who would care? I am alone in the world."

"You have friends, Horace."

"None."

"And I?" said she very low.

"You!" cried he. "You would care least of any."

There was a long silence. The gravel sounded beneath their slow tread. The night fell little by little. Horace heard a stifled sound and turned.

"You are crying, Clarisse?"

"You hurt me so!"

"Do you love me?"

She faltered, and his arms caught her and held her against his beating heart. Unresisting, she raised her face to his, and their lips met in a long kiss—the first.

Horace left the next morning. She waited long for him. The remains of the grand army returned without him. Still she hoped on. Years passed, and the war ended. Many who had been imprisoned returned, but still he delayed. She pictured him buried beneath the snow with numberless others who had dropped exhausted along the line of the terrible march.

Her parents urged upon her the duty of selecting a husband from the suitors who surrounded her. She resisted as long as possible, then yielded, vanquished by their insistence and by the certainty of his death. She gave her hand to Count d'Esterville.

It was ten years since the kiss given beneath the trees. She was sitting on a bench in the garden when a stranger approached her along the path. As he neared her she recognized him. It was Horace.

He came toward her with outstretched arms, then stopped, as though surprised at the coldness of her greeting.

"It is too late," she said. "I am already married."

He explained the reason of his long absence. Captivity, Siberia, the mines, all the frightful sufferings he had gone through, sustained always by a belief in her love and her loyalty to the unspoken vow made in the twilight of the garden. Never had he lost the hope that he would some day return to find her waiting for him—that their lives, so long divided, would be at last united forever.

"You lied to me that night when you said you loved me!" he cried, the bitterness of his disappointment making him cruel.

"No," she said. "I loved you, and I shall always love you. It is just for that reason that you must continue dead to me. I cannot trust myself with you."

And he left her.

This was the story of grandmother's life as I read it from the old diary. I remembered an old man who lived in the neighborhood and whom we children called "The Chevalier." I identified him with Horace. When grandmother became a widow and when she was an old lady to us, he came to live near her, and they spent many long hours together in the sweetest and purest companionship. I understand that the two old friends were dear to one another because their affection had been founded upon something more than friendship. They were too old to have ought to fear from gossiping tongues, and they had so much time to make up that they could not deny themselves the saddened pleasure of daily intercourse.

I put the little diary safely back in the old wardrobe and left the dear old room.

Ostentation in Hospitality. People seem to have lost the power of living quietly and happily in their country homes. The country is only made endurable to them by sport and gambling and boisterous house parties, and when from one cause or another these resources fail they are frankly bored and long for London. They are no longer content, as our fathers were, to entertain their friends with hospitable simplicity. So profoundly has all society been vulgarized by the worship of the golden calf that unless people can vie with alien millionaires in the sumptuousness with which they "do you"—delightful phrase—they prefer not to entertain at all. An emulous ostentation has killed hospitality.—London Tatler.

CHIEF DIPLOMATIC CENTER.

British Recognition of Washington as Hub of International Affairs.

Washington is in mourning; in London not a bell has tolled. Yet America has only lost a friend, England a most successful ambassador and a valuable public servant. We are not a diplomatic people. The bonds of sentiment which loosely bind Great Britain and the United States together have a firmer hold the other side of the Atlantic than they have on this. For private reasons no doubt President Roosevelt and the official world of Washington desire to show exceptional respect for the memory of the late Lord Pauncefoot, says the London Truth. But good will for England makes them specially anxious to give public expression to the grief caused by his death.

Perhaps the thought may be more clearly conveyed by reducing it to pounds, shillings and pence. There is a new factor in European politics. It is America. More particularly is this new factor important in the calculations of the British empire. The development of the United States has shifted, for Great Britain certainly, the diplomatic center from Paris to Washington, but our government altogether ignores the altered situation. The following table of salaries paid to our diplomatic representatives is instructive:

The British ambassador at Paris receives	$29,000
The British ambassador at Berlin	"8,000
The British ambassador at Constantinople	"8,000
The British ambassador at Vienna	"8,000
The British ambassador at St. Petersburg	"7,500
The British ambassador at Rome	"7,000
The British ambassador at Washington	"6,500

Apart from other considerations it is therefore obvious that Paris is regarded by our diplomatists as the prize of the service, while Washington is a low rung in the ambassadorial ladder. But the United States send their best men to represent them in London, and London is the appointment which those men most value.

It is time for us to remove from our minds the lingering impression that America is a rebellious British colony, a vulgar Anglo-Saxon suburb. The United States is now a great country, the most important foreign element that Great Britain has to deal with. Washington must therefore be made the principal post in our diplomatic service, and to do that the salary must be considerably raised, even if at the expense of the other first class appointments.

Guest—Oh, usually, after a good dinner, but he doesn't seem to care for it today.

Old Times at the Capital.
In recalling the lively and picturesque incidents which the old times enjoyed in Washington one is moved almost to tears over the commonplace nature of his own times. John Adams used to battle in the Potomac every morning at daylight because they had no bathtub in the White House, and no one ever pulled a kodak on him. President Taylor used to walk about the town and stop and chat with every one he met, like a policeman. A reception in the White House in these days is relieved of monotony only by the great crush of guests, who trample the clothes off one another's backs. Another president set up in the east room a six hundred pound cheese and invited the multitude to come in and help itself, which the multitude proceeded to do.

WIFE OF JEALOUS MAN

Too Friendly With Herbert Gill, Formerly of Newark, Claims
Mr. Ford—Sensational Suit for Damages in Sum of $5,000 is Result at Cambridge, O.

Herbert R. Gill, promoter of the Consumers Brewery of this city, and active in the operation of the plant when it started here five years ago, is defendant in a sensational damage suit at Cambridge, Ohio. One Mr. Ford alleges that his fifth wife was too friendly with Brewer Gill and a $5,000 suit for alienation of the wife's affections is the result. The following from Cambridge tells the story: Cambridge, O., June 23.—Clinton Ford has sued Herbert R. Gill, the brewer, formerly of Newark, O., for $5,000 for alienation of his wife's affections and has also sued for divorce. Mr. Gill claims that Ford has no grounds for the suit and that it is only a case of jealousy, which will be settled before it comes to Court.

Ford is very bitter in the matter and swears that Gill is guilty. He has quarreled a great deal with his wife lately, and after one of these tumults a week or so ago he decided to kill himself and for this purpose took laudanum, but failed to accomplish his end.

Ford has only been married to his present wife about two months, having married her the same week he obtained a divorce from his fourth wife.

Gill is president of the Cambridge Brewery and a shrewd business man. He is well known in Newark as he took a leading part in the organization of the Newark Consumers Brewery a few years ago. He is married and has several children. Ford is an old citizen of Cambridge, and is chiefly famous for his unsuccessful ventures in the matrimonial field. About two months ago he was divorced from his fourth wife and within a week had taken to himself a fifth, the daughter of Wm. Hood, the brewery employe who figured as the offender in a sensational shooting about a month ago. The fifth Mrs. Ford was not satisfied with her choice and did not give satisfaction to her much-wedded husband, for within a week after the marriage she ran away from her new home, and Clinton G. took an overdose of laudanum that failed.

Much of the unhappiness may be attributed to the fact that the present Mrs. Ford was the housekeeper for Gill all during last summer while he was here superintending the construction of the brewery and the installation of its machinery.

Ford was president of the laborers' union at the time of the series of strikes and differences between the laborers and contractors on the building of the street car line. He is now awaiting the convening of the grand jury to listen to testimony on a charge of malicious destruction of property. Having been induced, it is said, to batter down several brick piers that were built on the Sprague property on North Seventh street, to prevent the use of windows in the north wall of the Witten Building, the man Witten having bought the property from Sprague on condition that he put no windows in the north side. Ford got after the obstruction with a pick, it is said, and thereby hangs another tale of his troubles.

THE GIRL FROM ...NEW YORK

[Copyright, 1902, by C. D. Lewis.]

The girl from New York appeared at a farmhouse thirty miles from the city one hot day in August for a two weeks' vacation. It was a place where a limited number of people were "accommodated" for $7 per week and scenery, thrown in, but Miss Davis happened to be the only stranger at the farm just then. She was good looking, knew how to wear her clothes, and the hired man who swung her hammock between two trees lost his heart to her in the doing of it. He had thought of marriage in an indefinite way and had thought of a bride big enough and strong enough to wash, churn, milk, make soft soap and rag carpets and be a practical helpmate. Miss Davis was petite and white faced, but his love went out to her just the same. He decided that if she would marry him he would keep a hired girl and cut the carpet rags himself. That evening he saw more of her and fell more deeply in love, and his mind was made up to lay his heart at her feet as soon as he had finished plowing out the corn.

There were other hired men around there, and near by was a farmer who was a widower. There was also a windmill man "laying" up with a game leg and a young man circulating around to sell incubators. It wasn't three days before the girl had them all at her feet. One had rescued her from bumblebees, another had twisted the neck of an old ram that menaced her, a third had heroically killed a garter-snake that crossed her path, and a fourth had pulled her out of a swamp where she was looking for coconuts and bananas on the buckberry bushes.

As for the windmill and the incubator men, they came in on their cheek. They began by offering her unprecedented bargains in goods and ended by falling in love. It wasn't the stenographer's fault. She was out for her health and to break the routine of office work, and the greater the number who fell in love with her the more delightful the vacation. She gave them all an equal show and a fair show, but the trouble with each and every one of them was opportunity. Even a man selling the best windmill on earth, one warranted to produce wind to run itself, is a little shy about popping the question in the presence of two or three other men. If she made a date to walk with the incubator man in the orchard, at least two hired men turned up to spoil it, and if she wandered over the meadows in the dusk of evening to hear the whippoorwill sing as she eluded the arm of a hired man they were closely followed by ghostly figures.

The usual thing followed. Five or six men can't court one girl and still be friendly enough with each other to talk politics. The windmill man got out of bed in the night to row that he would smash the incubator man and his incubators to a jelly, and he of the chicken hatcher raised his right hand to heaven and took his solemn affidavit to ruin the windmill industry of the United States. The hired men swore to various things in various attitudes, and of course all this swearing was bound to produce results. Not a week had passed when one night as he was wending his way homeward through the summer darkness one young farmer was hit in the ear by a cucumber thrown by a ghostly yet vigorous hand. Then a second encountered a ghost face to face and was warned in an awful voice that death was on his trail, and the next night the windmill man was hit with a rock as he sauntered along with bulging heart.

Things couldn't go on in this way forever, of course. In the first place, the stenographer had only two weeks off, and in the next a man in love must either have things settled within a reasonable time or bang himself. There came a time when the girl from New York must speak up and let her choice be known, and she was equal to the occasion. She made a date with each and every victim, irrespective of politics or religion, down on the edge of the frog pond at a certain evening hour. Each thought himself the favored one, and each was there to swear that his love would last through ages. It was a tryst and a twist. There were a good many twists. They had discovered each other and scared all the frogs out of the neighborhood with their swear words and their solar plexus blows and their rolling about before it occurred to the windmill man to sit up and say: "Boys, I had a date to meet the girl on this spot."

"So did I," was answered in chorus. "She was to give me my answer." "Same here." "But has anybody seen her?" "No."

"Then let's quit slugging and investigate. She may have fallen off a fence and broken a leg." The crowd moved up to the farmhouse. The red hammock no longer swung between the cherry trees. The green rocker on the veranda no longer rocked. There was no sylphlike form wandering around the rosebush or looking for fireflies on the croquet grounds. The girl from New York had departed on the evening train, and she hadn't even left an old pair of slippers behind to comfort those who had loved her so truly and well.

"Any remarks?" asked the windmill man as he looked around at the rest of the crowd. "Nothing, I guess," replied the incubator man, "except to move to adjourn."

And the motion was unanimously carried. M. QUAD.

SEPARATE WASH WAISTS.

They Are Soft In Effect and Button Down the Back.

The majority of the blouse waists button down the back. Like the dresses, the waists are soft and boast of no stiff or starched effect.

Waists of grass linen all laid in fine perpendicular tucks and trimmed with wide applique of linen colored lace are considered smart. White china silk blouses are trimmed with Valenciennes in a plaid pattern. White organdies and mulls are trimmed with heavy Irish lace.

The gingham shirt waist seems to be a thing of the past, even for athletics. The all white shirt waist prevails. This is probably because it launders so much more satisfactorily.

White pique suits are giving way to white cotton etamine and the glace linen ones.

Long dust coats of pongee are serviceable to cover muslin gowns when on the street or in a public conveyance. They are usually made with strapped seams and wide lace collars.

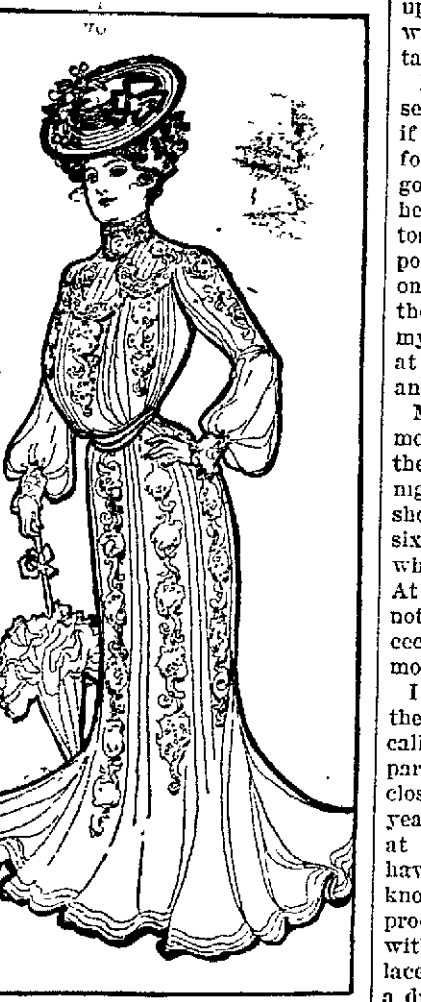

The cool, attractive waist in the illustration shows one of the latest designs. The yoke is transparent and has no collar. Across the bust and the upper parts of the sleeves there is a deep band composed of three shirings and cordings. Below this the waist is made very full. The sleeves have full transparent puffs gathered into a deep fitted undersleeve of lace.

and dainty little touches of chiffon or embroidery. Such a gown can be worn to restaurants or the theater. Crepe de chine and wool veiling make especially good gowns of this sort.

Just now there is a perfect craze for all the linen and pongee shades. This is to the almost complete exclusion of gray. The woman who thinks she cannot wear the trying ecru shades should try combining them with just the right shade of cherry red. Touches of this in the shape of embroidery or a band around the top of the collar even will make the trying shade of ecru becoming.

Colored shirt waists are almost entirely out of style. White, black and ecru are the only colors now worn in cotton blouses by women who understand the art of dressing well.

This pretty gown is made of white veiling and is trimmed with yellow lace. The waist is bloused and laid in clusters of three tucks, between which the applications of lace are placed. The sleeves have big puffs set into a cuff of lace. The skirt is tucked in clusters of three and finished with three folds around the bottom.

The hat which goes with this is of white straw trimmed with cherries and their leaves. JUDIC CHOLLET.

A NEGLECTED PARCEL

[Original.]

I lived in the oldest part of the city. My ancestors had been great people, and my home had once been the smallest of their residences. Now it stood between a junkshop and a grocery store. If it could be sold at all, it would not bring over $500. My income did not enable me to live anywhere else, and if I had not owned the place I don't see how I could have lived anywhere. I was at times in hopes that a society of ladies would purchase it to be kept in remembrance of the fact that during the American Revolution some big general had had his headquarters there, but it didn't.

Well, we grew poorer from day to day. My brave little wife kept on making the most of nothing and cheering me besides. How she managed to make the children look respectable I don't know. At last I conceived the idea of borrowing a little money on my house, turning it into a shop and going to live somewhere else. I secured a mortgage of $200 and commenced the alterations.

One day while some workmen were tearing down a partition they took out something rolled up in a piece of yellow paper. I was not there at the time, and the parcel was thrown into a corner. When the place was cleaned up, it was put in the cellar, the house was locked, and a sign "To Let" was tacked to the doorpost.

Before giving the first tenant possession I went over the house to see if anything had been left there. I found nothing worth taking away, but going to the cellar, noticed on a dust heap the roll in the yellow paper. I tore off a piece of the paper and exposed canvas. I threw the thing back on the dust heap, but on second thought picked it up and carried it to my little flat upstairs. Being in haste at the time, I tossed it into a closet and forgot all about it.

My tenant occupied the building six months without paying a cent of rent, then went out in the middle of the night with all his belongings. The shop remained vacant after that for six months. Then I got a new tenant, who paid one month's rent in a year. At the end of this time, the mortgagee not having received any interest, proceedings for the foreclosure of the mortgage were begun.

I was starting out one morning in the depths of despair when my wife called to me: "Henry, what's this old parcel? It has been standing in the cellar, taking up room, for more than a year." I cast an uninterested glance at it and, not remembering ever to have seen it, told her that I didn't know what it was. She unrolled it and produced an oil portrait of a woman with an immense hat on her head, a lace handkerchief about her neck and a dress with panners over the hips.

"By Jove!" I exclaimed. "How did that thing come into this house?"

"If you don't know, I don't," replied my wife. "I wonder if it is worth anything."

"I don't think it is. At any rate, it doesn't look very valuable. I'll take it out with me and find out." My wife rolled up the canvas, and, putting it under my arm, I left the house. Stopping at a printshop, I offered it for sale and received an offer of $2 for it. I went on, receiving offers all the way from that figure to $5, till I came to a place where they dealt in a better class of pictures. The dealer looked at it and told me that if I would leave it with him he would examine it when he had leisure. I could stop when I went home. He took my name and address, and I left him.

That evening as I entered my home my wife asked me what I had done with the picture, and, having forgotten it, I told her I had discovered that it was not worth over $5. She asked for the $5, whereupon I put her off by telling her that I was to have it the next day. The next day I forgot the matter again and excused myself by saying that the buyer had backed out. Thus the matter rested, indefinitely forgotten.

At the end of a week I received a note from the picture dealer asking me to call. My wife and I were going out together to make some purchases and went first to the picture dealer, hoping to get a few dollars to help us out.

"Hi!" he said as we entered the store. "What do you want for that picture?"

"I have been offered $5," I said, hoping that he would give me six. He smiled. "Very well, make it five. I'm hard up and need the money."

"Where did the picture come from?" A glimmer of remembrance came to me. "I think it was found in my house, 57 — street."

"How did it get there?"

"I don't know. The house was pulled to pieces about the time the picture appeared. Perhaps it fell out from somewhere."

"Did you own the house?"

"Yes. I own it now."

He went to a safe and took out the picture. Pointing to a lower corner which had evidently been cleaned, he showed me the word "Copley."

"My friend," he said, "that picture was lost in 177—. It belonged to the J—s, the name you left me. I will give you $30,000 for it."

"Great heavens!" I cried. "Do you mean it?"

"I will pay you now."

I did not stop to look further, going out of the store with a check for the amount, but I have since learned that the dealer gave me about what the treasure was worth.

We dined that night on champagne and oysters.

MONTGOMERY MOORE.

GEORGE ELIOT'S FACE.

Said to Have Been a Combination of Dante and Savonarola.

A close friend of George Eliot's, writing of her personal appearance, said: "She was not, as the world in general is aware, a handsome or even a personable woman. Her face was long; the eyes not large or beautiful in color—they were, I think, of a grayish blue; the hair, which she wore in old fashioned braids, coming low down on either side of her face, of a rather light brown. It was streaked with gray when last I saw her. Her figure was of middle height, large boned and powerful. Lewes often said that she inherited from her peasant ancestors a frame and constitution originally very robust. Her head was finely formed, with a noble and well balanced arch from brow to crown. The lips and mouth possessed a power of infinitely varied expression.

"George Lewes once said to me, when I made some observation to the effect that she had a sweet face (I meant that the face expressed great sweetness): 'You might say what a sweet hundred faces! I look at her sometimes in amazement. Her countenance is constantly changing.'"

"The said lips and mouth were distinctly sensuous in form and fullness. She has been compared to the portraits of Savonarola (who was frightful) and of Dante (who, though stern and bitter looking, was handsome). Something there was of both faces in George Eliot's physiognomy.

"Lewes told us in her presence of the exclamation uttered suddenly by some one to whom she was pointed out at a place of public entertainment. 'That,' said a bystander, 'is George Eliot.' The gentleman to whom she was thus indicated gave one swift, searching look and exclaimed, sotto voce, 'Dante's aunt.' Lewes thought this happy, and he recognized the kind of likeness that was meant to the great singer of the Divine Comedy. She herself playfully disclaimed any resemblance to Savonarola. But, although such resemblance was very distant—Savonarola's peculiarly unbalanced countenance being a strong caricature of hers—some likeness there was."

Keeping Up With Fate.

THE COPYRIGHT LAW.

First Measure Passed For the Protection of Literary Property.

April 10, 1710, is a noteworthy date in the history of literature. On that day came into operation an act "for the encouragement of learning by vesting the copies of printed books in the authors or purchasers of such copies." This was the first measure passed for the protection of literary property. The word "copyright" according to Dr. Murray, was not used before 1767. In the preamble of the bill, which is said to have been drafted by Dean Swift, the necessity of a measure "to enable learned men to write useful books" is dwelt upon. By its provisions two terms of copyright, each of fourteen years, were created for all future publications, one term to follow immediately upon the other if the author were still living at the expiration of the first term.

According to a subsidiary clause, if any publisher issued a book at a price judged too high by certain "discreet persons" he was liable to a penalty. The "discreet persons" included, among others, the archbishop of Canterbury, the lord chancellor and the vice chancellors of Oxford and Cambridge. From them devolved the somewhat delicate task of fixing the book's value. This clause was repealed in 1739, but the term of copyright remained unaltered until 1842, when it was extended to the life of the author and seven years, or forty-two years from the date of publication, whichever may prove longer. England was the first country thus to protect the rights of authors. France followed suit in 1793, but in Germany no copyright law existed until 1870.—London News.

HEROIC MEASURES

(Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company.)

"Mary, I don't like it," said Farmer Johnson as he and his wife sat at the front door of a summer evening, "and if we don't put our foot right down it will probably end in her running away and disgracing us. Something has got to be done."

"Yes, Abraham."

Things would not have appeared so dreadful to an outsider. The Johnsons were well to do people with one child, now an attractive girl of twenty. Three young farmers who asked for her hand had been kindly but firmly refused. Her mother had begun to wonder if the right man appeared. He was Paul Harper, a young civil engineer whose health had failed. He had been packed off into the country to recuperate. He was honest enough to admit that his fortune did not go beyond a few hundred dollars and that his future was by no means assured.

He secured board at Taylor's, which was only a quarter of a mile from Johnson's. It followed that he was invited to call, and the two young people fell in love with each other. Paul had not asked Mr. Johnson for Nellie's hand, but the mother had seen how things were going and reported to her husband. They had said a few words to the daughter as a precautionary measure, and while she blushed and showed confusion, she "sassed back" in a way to surprise them. Their first move was to treat Harper with coldness, but it did not keep him away.

Had Paul asked the privilege of becoming her son-in-law he would have been sent packing. The fact that he didn't ask and the fact that Nellie "sassed back" started a train of thought that ended in the belief that an elopement was on the tapis. They must keep their eyes open and be prepared for any sudden emergency.

It was a week before the sudden emergency bobbed up. Nellie had appeared nervous and absentminded all the afternoon. She had overhauled her wardrobe. She had started to write a letter or two and given it up. She had roamed up and down stairs and walked outdoors. The young engineer had not shown up as usual, and this was looked upon with suspicion. After supper tears were seen in Nellie's eyes, and as she walked in the orchard the wife said to her husband:

"Abraham, it's tonight."

"What?" he asked.

"The elopement."

"You don't mean it, Mary."

"Yes, I do. Nellie's been preparing for it all the afternoon, and she means to slip out of the house as soon as we are abed and go off with him. I've been watching her like a cat, and she can't fool her mother."

"And what shall we do?"

"Leave that to me. You just act as if nothing was going on, and I'll give you my word to stop any elopement and cure that girl of her foolishness."

At bedtime Paul Harper was still missing, and Nellie sat under the cherry tree by the back door. As the father started for the barn to make the last for the night the mother asked the girl to go with her to the springhouse to strain the evening's milk. But few words were exchanged between them. As they finished their work the mother swiftly passed outdoors, slammed and locked the door behind her, and the would be eloper was a prisoner. The jailer had hardly reached the house, with the key in her hand and a grim smile on her face, when Abraham came in from the barn. He was chuckling and rubbing his hands together.

"I've locked Nell up in the springhouse," said the mother as she hung up the key, "and she'll stay right there till morning."

"And I've done something just as cute," chuckled the father. "Just as I shut up the barn along come that feller across lots, and he was going on to tell me that he guessed he'd have to go back to town next week, when I grabbed him and shoved him into the out-door cellar and locked the door on him. He won't run off with our gal tonight, he won't."

"Abraham, you are mighty cute."

"And so are you."

"They didn't go to bed at once. They sat up for an hour to see if the prisoners wouldn't raise an alarm and beg to be released. No alarm was raised, and concluding that they were ashamed and sulking, the old folks finally retired. Excitement kept them awake for awhile longer, but sleep had held them fast for three or four hours when the wife suddenly sat up in bed and almost shouted:

"Abraham Johnson, get out of bed as quick as ever you can!"

"What's the matter, Mary?" he asked as he opened his eyes.

"The matter is that we are two of the biggest fools in America! Get your duds on without losing a minute!"

"But what is it?" he asked as he got out of bed.

"I locked Nell up in the springhouse, didn't I?"

"Yes, you said you did, and I don't believe she can bust her way out."

"And you locked that young feller up in the out-door cellar?"

WYETH WON THE DERBY.

The great American Derby, which was this year worth $25,125 to the winner, was won in easy fashion by Wyeth, John A. Drake's colt, with Jockey Lucien Lyne up, the horse carrying 122 pounds. Heno, the heavily played Eastern colt, went to the post a favorite at from 2 1/4 to 1 to 1 to 5. The race was a great one from a contest standpoint, and was run over a cuppy track, seconds slow. The largest crowd that ever saw a derby decided, was present, it being estimated that 60,000 people saw the race.

Wyeth opened in the books at 10 to 1 and received considerable play, his odds being forced down to 8 to 1 at post time, after the Gates crowd, consisting of John A. Drake the owner, Charles Gates, and Isaac Elwood had played the horse in Jim O'Leary's book to win $15,000. Mr. Drake is estimated to have won $50,000 besides the stake. O'Leary paid out $123,000 on the Wyeth victory. The Gates crowd bet Kid Weller to a standstill, and to protect himself he sent $1,000 against O'Leary, playing $500 on Wyeth to win and $500 for place.

Heno, the favorite with odds winner of last week's St. Louis derby, went out from the fall of the flag, and fought for the lead until the stretch was reached, setting a terrific pace. When challenged it was found they had shot their bolt, and Wyeth well ridden by Lyne, passed them, as did Lucien Appleby and Aladdin. Bullman, Heno's jockey, showed poor judgment in trying to tip toe such a high-class field, though many doubt if he could have won with a perfect ride. Hermis and Belle Commoner, backed by the Cincinnati contingent, ran a very disappointing race, and the former's ride by McCue may be investigated.

CORNELL WON EVERYTHING.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 23.—Cornell won all three of the events in the Intercollegiate Amateur Association regatta Saturday. The four-oared race was a bit of easy work for her, but in both the freshmen and 'varsity eight she was so closely pressed that she really had to win them in the last half mile by a display of reserve force which none of the other crews could bring to bear. The summaries follow:

Four-oared race: two miles; Cornell won by five lengths; time 10:43 3-5. Pennsylvania second, by three lengths, time 10:54 4-5. Columbia third; time 11:08.

Freshmen eight-oared race; two miles; Cornell won by two and three-quarters lengths; time 9:34 4-5. Wisconsin second, by two and one-half lengths; time 9:42 4-5. Columbia third, by one and one-half lengths; time 9:49. Syracuse fourth, by four lengths; time 9:53. Pennsylvania fifth; time 10:05.

'Varsity eight-oared race, four miles; Cornell won by three lengths; time 19:05 3-5. Wisconsin second, by one and one-half lengths; time 19:13 3-5. Columbia third, by one and three-quarters lengths; time 19:18 3-5. Pennsylvania fourth, by three-quarters length; time 19:26. Syracuse fifth, by two feet; time 19:31 2-5. Georgetown sixth; time 19:32.

The showing of Cornell was even better than was expected of her, although it was conceded that the crew that beat the Ithacans would win the varsity race. Wisconsin's crews got second in both eight-oar events, and their races were a source of great satisfaction to Coach O'Dea and their admirers. In the varsity the Badgers closely pressed Cornell for over three miles, but the New Yorkers had considerable in reserve.

Coach Courtney of Cornell was made a hero by the students of the university, but while glowing with pride and satisfaction, he modestly replied, "That's all right boys. I had the finest material in the world to pick a winning crew from." This last remark may be true, but the fact remains that it is a great personal victory for the veteran aquatic coach.

PASSING OF DAN CREEDON.

Dan Creedon, the once famous middle-weight pugilist, sailed for Australia Saturday, working his way back to his old country. Creedon has lost his wife, his money and his reputation, and is broke financially and in spirit. His mother owns a prosperous hotel in Australia, and it is hoped Dan, who is a good fellow, will find peace and comfort in his latter days.

BRITISH WIN AT POLO.

The British polo team defeated the Americans in the third and deciding match on Saturday 7 goals to 1. The teams were:

Americans—J. M. Waterbury, R. L. Agassiz, Foxhall Keene and Lawrence Waterbury.

English—Cecil Nickalls, Patterson Nickalls, George Miller and Walter H. Buckmaster.

Although the weather was most unfavorable, the club grounds had seldom seen such an assemblage as attended. Among the Americans present were Whitelaw Reid, the United States special ambassador to the coronation, Mrs. Reid and Miss Reid, United States Ambassador Chase and Mrs. Choate, Michael H. DeYoung, proprietor of the San Francisco Chronicle, Mrs. DeYoung and Miss DeYoung, and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hay.

DONLIN'S PHYSICAL BREAKDOWN

Mike Donlin, now serving a six-months sentence in a Baltimore jail for assault, is in the hospital on account of worry over his position. Ball players are collecting the $250 fine imposed on Mike, and Governor Smith is not averse to pardoning him, as many influential men, including Senator Gorman are interested in his behalf. He is a physical wreck, but if released it is hoped he can regain his health. Donlin is signed to play with Cincinnati upon his release.

THE SEASON'S GREATEST.

Chicago, June 23.—The Chicago and the Pittsburg clubs of the National League Sunday battled a nineteen-inning game, breaking all records for this season.

It was a brilliant contest from the opening to the closing inning, and it will ever be remembered by the followers of the Orphans, for the game in the final nineteenth inning was won by the Seleites.

The Orphans were first to score. The champions tied the score and then took the lead. The Orphans tied the score, and then the real battle was on.

Not until the nineteenth inning was there another score. In this inning the Cubs made winning run after two outs Congalton fied out to center. Kling singled to left. He stole second. Tinker went out at first, with Kling taking third on the play.

With Kling on third the Orphan Captain Lowe smashed one between Leach and Conroy and Kling raced across the plate. Final score, Chicago 3, Pittsburg 2.

JEFFRIES AND FITZ.

San Francisco, June 23.—It is reported on good authority that the big match between Jeffries and Fitzsimmons will not be postponed. A member of the San Francisco Athletic Club has stated that the fight will take place as scheduled as the winner has promised to give Corbett a go, and this event has been set for the latter part of August or the first of September.

The contest will come off on time, so the winner can rest up and get in condition. The reduction in railroad rate given to Pythians did not increase the attendance over fifty, which ends that idea for advocating postponement.

Fitz went out over the road for ten miles Saturday morning, while in the afternoon he went back to the "gym" and worked out with Soldier Wilson. Jeffries has limbered up his sore arm, and now it has ceased to trouble him. He has never started into training feeling as well as he does now, nor has he ever been so confident of victory. He devotes himself to "gym" work and hasn't taken up boxing yet.

INTEMPERANCE AMONG SENATORS.

The crack team representing Columbus in the American Association has gone wrong, and from first place with a good margin, they have dropped in a couple of weeks to a bad fourth. The trouble is easily located. McMakin was released a week ago, and Saturday Dan Lally went into the game drunk, and was suspended for the balance of the season. Such actions are those of an ingrate and fool. Lally had made good and was a favorite in Columbus. There are others, it is said, and discipline will be meted out to them.

SPORTING NOTES.

The Texas Outlaws won from Helsey's glass house team at Idlewild Park Saturday by a score of 7 to 4.

Rube Waddell, the eccentric south-paw is on the road east and will join the Philadelphia Athletics.

Horace Fogel was after Frantz, Harvard's big first baseman, for the New York's. Frantz however, will not play professionally this summer, and will return to Harvard in the fall.

For fifteen innings those two veteran slab artists Cy Young and Winnie Mercer fought it out at Detroit Saturday, the Mahoning county rallsplitter lasting longer, and Boston won.

What is Population of Newark Today?

CASH PRIZES

For Those Who Make the Nearest Guesses.

Garefully Prepared Census Now Being Taken and Advocate Readers
Have An Opportunity

To Secure a Little Money Without Effort and Without Expense—The Only Condition is Each Guess Must be Accompanied by Paid in Advance Subscription to the Daily Advocate for Five Weeks.

The sum of Two Hundred Dollars in Gold has been deposited in the bank to the Advocate's credit for free distribution among the readers of the Daily Advocate upon conditions which will permit every subscriber to participate.

This money will be given in thirty-five prizes to those who will do a little figuring and place the result of their calculations on a coupon clipped from the Advocate and deposit it at this office with a paid in advance subscription to the Daily Advocate for five weeks. In other words any subscriber may take part in the contest and free distribution of prizes by paying five weeks in advance for the paper, (all arrearsages must first be settled) or any new subscriber may send his estimate to this office by paying 50 cents, for which sum the Daily Advocate will be sent to any address in the city of the United States for a period of five weeks.

ONE MAY GUESS AS OFTEN AS HE CHOOSES providing each guess or estimate is accompanied by 50 cents for five weeks' subscription to the paper.

Now as to the nature of the contest:

The Advocate has several reputable persons engaged in taking the census of Newark. The work is being done with greater accuracy and more care than was the official census of 1900. Every building in the city (none beyond the corporation lines) is being visited and a careful record is being made of the names and number of the dwellers in each building. The work is being done by experienced census takers and under the system employed nobody can escape and none can be duplicated. The result will show the exact population of Newark on June 1, 1902.

In 1890 Newark had a population of 14,289, and the official census of 1900 showed that there were 18,157 people living in Newark two years ago. WHAT IS THE POPULATION OF THIS THRIVING LITTLE CITY TODAY? Here is a pointer that will help you to arrive at an intelligent conclusion. The school enumerators have just reported that there are 5,070 school youth between the ages of 6 and 21 year living in Newark.

The census taking is being done without collusion among the enumerators, who each report to a gentleman in another city who makes a specialty of just such work as this. No person in the Advocate office will see any report or will know any more about the result than any reader of the paper until the time for distribution of the fund, but to guard against what might appear to be partiality, a rule has been established that no employee of the Advocate Company can participate in the contest directly or indirectly.

The estimate must be made on a coupon clipped from the Advocate, and be mailed or left at the Advocate counting room with remittance for which the paper will be sent to any address designated. Before any old subscriber can participate in the contest all indebtedness for past subscription must be paid.

This contest is started primarily to stimulate the interest of our people in the growth of our popular little city, more intimately familiarize them with its progress and prosperity, and at the same time provide an interesting and intellectual contest in which every one has an equal opportunity to secure one of 35 cash prizes, and by which the paper may be introduced into new homes.

The Advocate is the best and most popular paper in Newark and once a subscriber in nine of ten cases, always a subscriber. The Advocate gives special attention to the home news, to Licking county news, and Ohio news, with special correspondence from many points and the telegraph service of the Scripps McRae Press Association. Your Vacation in Colorado? Why Not

We are going to sell tickets at less than half fare this summer so as to enable people of moderate means to spend their vacations in glorious Colorado.

It is by no means a country of high prices. Our handbook tells all about the hotels, boarding-houses and ranches, their prices, names and addresses of the proprietors, attractions within reach, rates for livery, the fishing and hunting, charges for guides, etc. Ask for a copy. No charge. And with the book we will enclose a circular telling about the railroad ticket rates and trains. It takes only one night on the road to go from Chicago to Colorado. There is no place in the world like Colorado for beauty of mountain scenery and perfection of climate—it is ideal. I have never known anyone to return from Colorado disappointed. Where could you find a more delightful place to spend your vacation?

MEMORIAL

SERVICES HELD SUNDAY BY THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Two Hundred Members of the Order
Attended the Exercises—Rev. O.
C. Wright Spoke.

The annual memorial services under the auspices of Newark lodge No. 13, and Roland Lodge No. 305, Knights of Pythias, were held Sunday afternoon a good representation from both lodges participating.

At 2 o'clock 200 Knights left the Castle Hall of No. 13 and marched to Cedar Hill cemetery.

Here they divided into squads and placed garlands of tender remembrance upon the graves of the half hundred Knights buried there.

After the ceremonies of decorating the graves all assembled at the mound where memorial addresses were made by Rev. O. C. Wright of Columbus on behalf of No. 13, and Dr. I. M. Palmer on behalf of No. 305.

Appropriate music was rendered by a quartet consisting of Messrs. Uffner and Larkin from 13 and Lippincott and Hirst from 305.

The Buckeye Band also furnished music.

DEATH

Of Mrs. Sarah Cochran at the Age of 75 Years Occurred Saturday at Midnight.

Mrs. Sarah Cochran aged 75 years, died Saturday night at 11:45 o'clock at the home of her son-in-law, Sid B. Livingston, 22 1-2 North Park Place of bronchitis.

The funeral will take place Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the Wilkin school house, interment being made in Barnes cemetery. Rev. H. N. Miller of the Church of Christ will officiate.

Three children survive. They are Amanda and Belle Cochran, and Mrs. Livingston all of Newark. Two sons are dead. The deceased was the widow of William Cochran who died seventeen years ago.

LATEST IN DANCES.

Teachers of the Art Approve Three New Forms.

The dancing masters of the United States and Canada at their annual convention decided upon three new dances to be launched this year with the convention's stamp of approval, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. The dances are the antlers' gavotte, by E. J. Connolly of Oswego; the Olympia, a fancy dance for children, by R. G. Bauman of Albany, and the military dip waltz, whose inventor is George Lovely of Springfield, Mass. They are all "professors" and so are the rest of the association's 1,000 members.

The military dip, as demonstrated the other day by its inventor and Miss Helena Harker of Fort Wayne, one of the danseuses, seemed to be much like the so called dip waltz, which has been in vogue for several years. The difference lies in the addition of a dip forward on one foot and a second dip backward on the other foot and then a plain ordinary waltz. This is a description of the gyrations of the antlers' gavotte:

March two measures, four twostep movements, with usual turning; three glides to left, finishing on right foot; waltz to finish of strain and repeat.

The Olympia was too involved to be described. The three dances, according to the professors, will certainly be the rage next winter, no matter what their summer fate may be.

WEDDING

Of Mr. Joseph Schiffer and Miss
Schmidt Took Place at 9 O'Clock
Monday in New York.

St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York was the scene of a pretty and interesting wedding this morning when Miss May Schmidt of New York was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Joseph Schiffer of this city, by Rev. Joseph S. Schmidt, rector of St. Anthony's church, Cleveland, O., assisted by the Rev. Father Reilly, vicar general of the New York archdiocese at which time a high pontifical nuptial mass was celebrated. An interesting feature in connection with the nuptials was the fact that the clergyman, who performed the ceremony, is the brother of the bride and from Ohio. The bride was attended by relatives in that city and the groom by his friend Mr. W. J. Fitzgibbon an officer and a stockholder in the Everett Glass Company of this city, who accompanied Mr. Schiffer last week to New York.

The ceremony was performed at 9 o'clock and the bride was given away by her father, with whom she advanced to the chancel rail. The church decorations were in exquisite taste, including palms, ferns and roses. At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception was held at the Schmidt residence for the relatives and friends of the families. Mr. and Mrs. Schiffer left for an extended trip to Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Asheville, N. C., and later will spend a week at Tate Springs, Tenn., and after the termination of the tour, will reside in Newark.

The groom came to Newark from Shelby several years ago and entered the merchant tailoring business, and has established a lucrative trade and he is an upright, honest young man and highly esteemed in this community. The bride was born and brought up in Shelby in this state, and attended the parochial schools and a few years ago went with her parents to New York to reside with a brother who holds a responsible and prominent position there.

The bride is well known here as she spent last summer with friends in this city. After the termination of the honeymoon they will reside in Newark where an elegant home will be furnished by the groom. The newly wedded couple will receive the congratulations of their many friends for a happy and prosperous voyage through the journey of life upon their arrival in this city.

AMUSEMENTS.

The auditorium at Idlewild Park Casino was nearly filled Sunday afternoon with a well pleased audience and the bill presented was up to the standard which the management has endeavored to maintain this season. The first number on the program, Musical Thor, was good. He plays a number of pleasing pieces on the banjo and winds up with several good numbers on the ever popular xylophone.

Aggie Behler, the American Chasone, sings some new music and is very ably assisted by the young soprano, Master Neibolas Wright.

"Cousin Jack's Letter," a charming little musical skit, offered by Geo. P. Watson and Marguerite Newton was liberally applauded. The couple are good entertainers and proved a good number.

The ever popular black face comedian, Tom Riley, is there with the goods. He sings several coon songs that will be drawing cards during the week. Be sure and hear him in his "Back, Back, Back" song.

The last number on the bill, Reid and Gilbert, in the laughable comedy sketch "The Actress and the Mick", made the hit of the afternoon.

The music was good and the jokes better, as a native of the Emerald Isle, Gilbert certainly knows his business and his witticisms were fresh and up-to-date.

Visitors to the park this week will be well repaid for going.

Judge S. M. Douglass.

Without regard to party, there is a general and enthusiastic expression of satisfaction in Mansfield over the unanimous renomination of Judge S. M. Douglass for circuit judge. He has conducted himself upon the bench with so much dignity, justice and impartiality that the people of all the fifteen counties composing the circuit feel that he is fairly entitled to a second term. In this manner only can they testify to their approval of his work during his first term. Judge Douglass' experience upon the bench is now such that he will be able to do even better work in the future than he has done in the past.—Mansfield Shield.

Judge Davis' Wit.

The late Noah Davis, justice of the supreme court of New York, was one of many judges and lawyers who make the courtroom the scene of some of our best wit and humor. The New York Commercial Advertiser gives some illustrations.

Once a lawyer objected to a witness, but Judge Davis refused to sustain him. The lawyer cried, "But, your honor, I submit!" And here he broke off.

"That's right," said the judge quickly; "always submit. Crier, adjourn court!"

In one case over which he presided there were fifty-five distinct offenses and four counts on each offense, 220 in all.

"Well," said Judge Davis, "there are more counts than in a German principality."

A NOVEL AUTOMOBILE. Daintily Served

Cincinnati Man to Have Fastest Machine in the World.

WILL BE TWELVE FEET LONG.

Owner Expects to Show That American Built Vehicles Are Superior to the Foreign—Strength Forty-eight Horsepower—"One Horse Shay" Idea a Feature in the Construction.

The old "one horse shay," made famous in poetry by Oliver Wendell Holmes, is to have a prototype in Cincinnati in the form of a remarkable automobile, says the St. Louis Republic. This new and unique automobile is being built by W. H. Summer for Mr. Wilbern, a retired millionaire tobacco merchant of Cincinnati.

"Yes," said the millionaire, "I am having built for me an automobile on the exact plan of Holmes' 'one horse shay.' Every part of my new machine will be as strong as any other. There will be no weak parts whatsoever in the vehicle.

"My new automobile is being built for me for two purposes. One is to demonstrate that we can build finer automobiles in America than they can in France, which is ahead of the world in the use of automobiles, and that Cincinnati is one of the best locations in this country for a large automobile factory. If this machine now being built for me should prove the success I expect of it, it is very probable that a large automobile factory will be erected in this city, where every part of the vehicles will be made under one roof."

This new machine is built with the object of making it the strongest, finest and fastest racing automobile in the world. The vehicle is being built to make eighty miles an hour on a racing track and from thirty-five to forty miles an hour touring over the country.

The automobile will be 12 feet in length, 5 feet 8 inches wide and 26 1/2 inches from the ground, this being much lower than the racer operated by Fournier, the noted French chauffeur. It is being erected to cut the air. The engine base will be of aluminum mixed with a certain quantity of alloy. An aluminum box casting for the engine has been made by a Cincinnati firm that is the largest aluminum casting ever made in the United States, being 32 by 20 by 12 inches and weighs eighty pounds. The same casting in iron would have weighed 400 pounds. Every part of the automobile except the carbonizer is being made in Cincinnati.

There will be a twenty-four gallon tank of gasoline. It will take one gallon of gasoline for every twenty-five miles. The whole machine when touring will weigh 2,250 pounds and 2,000 pounds when racing. The maximum strength will be forty-eight horsepower. All the running section of the machine will be inclosed in a dust proof aluminum case which will be three parts filled with the finest lubricating oil, the intention of Mr. Wilbern being to see how many miles this automobile will run without the machinery getting out of order.

The builder, Mr. Summer, states that the machine will be positively noiseless. Mr. Wilbern decided to have this "one horse shay" built as the result of an accident. He was out riding in his small automobile a few weeks ago, accompanied by Miss Eleanor Hosen of Mount Auburn. The two front wheels broke off, throwing Miss Hosen and Mr. Wilbern out of the vehicle. Miss Hosen was slightly injured at the time, and the automobile came near being made into old scrap iron by a street car. After that accident Mr. Wilbern reread the "One Horse Shay," and, like the old deacon of the poem, he vowed he would have an automobile built in a logical way.
